CURATORIAL STATEMENT

1 In this essay, we use the term Kānaka to refer to Native Hawaiians. In specific instances, we also use Native Hawaiian(s). When we do, it is because the individual, group, journal, exhibition, or event we are referencing used or uses this term.

Aia nō ka pono—o ka hoʻohuli i ka lima i lalo, ‘aʻole o ka hoʻohuli i luna

We three—artists, curators, educators, Kānaka—are bound to one another within a specific historical and material network of relations. Held together by affective connections that persist across generations, we are also linked to islands, oceans, continents, and communities in a swirling scene of perpetually shifting centers and margins. Within this energetic expanse, our overlapping and diverging identities make evident the situatedness of marked and unmarked existence in Hawai‘i where we are privileged to be able to live, work, make, and care.

If we are “self-identified,” we are also defined by the communities around us, those we belong to by choice and those that claim us, koho ‘ia—choice no choice. These communities too are shaped by their surroundings and especially the energy that flows throughout. Again, at this intersection of forces we three, in the spirit of friendship, obligation, and gratitude, accepted an invitation to engage collaboratively with a public art collection at a state museum. We did so in order to bring forward the multi-layered cultural and artistic production of Ka Pae‘āina o Hawai‘i.

Taking action from a collective position informed by our individual genealogical and geographical considerations, the text that follows communicates our perspectives and contextualizes Mai hoʻohuli i ka lima i luna, a curatorial act of resistance that reflects deeply on what it means to promote, perpetuate, preserve and encourage culture and the arts in Hawai‘i today. Presented at the Hawai‘i State Art Museum, in downtown Honolulu, O‘ahu, this group exhibition gathers together works in a variety of materials from the Art in Public Places Collection of the Hawai‘i State Foundation on Culture and the Arts.

We initially developed Mai hoʻohuli i ka lima i luna in conversation with Jonathan “JJ” Johnson, Executive Director of the Hawai‘i State Foundation on Culture & the Arts, Karen A. Ewald, Director of the Art in Public Places Program, and organizers of the 13th Festival of Pacific Arts & Culture (FESTPAC). FESTPAC is the world’s largest convergence of Oceanic nations, occurring every four years since its founding in 1972 and the exhibition was intended to take place alongside an extensive program of performance, hands-on demonstrations, community workshops, and educational talks in June 2020. While the festival has been rescheduled for June 2024, due to the public health and economic impact of the COVID-19 global pandemic the exhibition remains on schedule. Alas, amidst the uncertainties generated by rapidly changing circumstances, after taking pause, he oia mau nō kākou!

Nānā i ke kumu...Always already turning towards source

Across Ka Paeʻāina o Hawai‘i, an archipelago that many call home, it is common to begin any endeavor—whether artistic, curatorial, educational, or political—by acknowledging kumu. Keeping with this acknowledgement, and our own individual and collective culturally rooted practices, the title of the exhibition, Mai ho'ohuli i ka lima i luna, is adapted from one of the many 'ōlelo no'eau passed on in written form by composer, educator, and scholar Mary Kawena Pukui (1895-1986).

Aia nō ka pono—o ka ho'ohuli i ka lima i lalo, 'a'ole o ka ho'ohuli i luna.

That is what is should be—to turn the hands palms down, not palms up.

No one can work with the palms of [their] hands turned up. When a person is always busy, [they are] said to keep [their] palms down.3

An enduring source of guidance, this ‘ōlelo no'eau reminds us not to turn our hands away from 'āina / that which feeds / life-sustaining work. After all, these same ancestral lands, waters, and skies, in spite of endless transformations, have supported and continue to support myriad expressions of Hawai'i—animate and inanimate lifeforms.

The Host Institution: A Brief and Partial History

In 2002, the Hawai'i State Foundation on Culture and the Arts (HSFCA) opened the Hawai'i State Art Museum (HiSAM) at the former Army Navy Young Men's Christian Association now known as No. 1 Capitol District Building. Prior to the current structure, originally erected in 1928, the site supported the first hotel in the Kingdom, the Hawaiian Hotel built in 18724 during the reign of Lot Kapuāiwa, King Kamehameha V (1830-1872). HiSAM and the HSFCA exist at the literal and metaphorical crossroads of complex and contested historical and present-day lived realities in Hawai'i. They are located next to the 'Iolani Palace, where in an act of war, in an armed invasion, and in violation of international law, the Committee of Safety backed by the United States military launched a coup d'état against Queen Lili'uokalani on January 17, 1893 leading to the overthrow of the Hawaiian Kingdom.

The HSFCA was established in July 1965 by the State Legislature as the “official arts agency of the State of Hawai'i,”5 and is administratively attached to the Department of Accounting and General Services. As an agency, the HSFCA's mission was “the promotion, perpetuation, and encouragement of culture, arts, history, and humanities for the people of the State of Hawai'i to enhance their quality of life, to promote educational enrichment, to contribute towards the State's economic development, and to reinforce the strong sense of place and cultural identity of Hawaii's people.”

Two years later, in June of 1967, the State Legislature passed the Art-in-State-Buildings Law, signed by Governor John A. Burns (1909-1975). In doing so, Hawai'i set a national standard becoming “the first state in the nation to adopt a 'Percent-for-Art Law,'”7 thereby requiring

---

4 In 1917, the Hawaiian Hotel moved to Waikīkī and became the Royal Hawaiian.
6 Ibid., i.
one percent of construction and renovation appropriations designated for all state buildings in the Hawaiian Islands be used for the commission and acquisition of artworks for the state’s public places. This, in turn, led to the formation of the Art in Public Places (APP) Program within the HSFCA.

Emerging out of a governmental concern for environmental and aesthetic standards of state facilities, the APP Program created the necessary conditions for the state to begin commissioning permanent works of art (PWA), purchasing relocatable works of art (RWA), and accepting works of art as gifts. The first RWA entered the APP Collection in 1967. As of May 2020, the state’s holdings encompass over 7,200 artworks (including PWA and RWA) by more than 2,400 artists with ties, direct and/or indirect, to Hawai‘i.

For over a half-century, the APP Collection has served as the most significant public collection of Modern and Contemporary Art of Hawai‘i. Eligible works of art must enter the APP Collection in one of the following ways: an artist may be commissioned through an open call process to produce artwork for permanent installation at a state public place, such as a school, community college, library, or airport; artwork gifted or included in a juried or curated public exhibition within the state is approved through a formal multipart recommendation and review process involving Acquisition Award Selection Committees, and the State Board of Commissioners; on rare occasions, committees conduct studio visits and acquire works of art directly from artists.

In 1983, sixteen years after the start of the APP Collection, the HSFCA initiated the Folk & Traditional Arts (FTA) Program with a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. In the years following, the FTA Program provided increased support for “traditional folk arts” throughout the state in an attempt to address an aspect of cultural and artistic production that was for the most part absent from the APP Collection. Apprentice Mentoring grants, supporting the “next-generation cultural practitioners, especially cultural practitioner teachers,” gave artists from marginalized communities, particularly Kānaka, a legitimate access point to the HSFCA. Although the FTA Program was a much-needed additional source of funding, for artist practitioners, it also reinscribed, for better or worse, an arbitrary line between “contemporary” and “traditional” material and production in the arts of Hawai‘i. Nearly forty years later, this binary awaits deconstruction.

Establishing Connections, Rebuilding Relationships

What are the demographics—as defined by race, ethnicity, gender, class, age, etc.—of the FTA Program and APP Collection?¹ How do these “checkbox statistics” reveal the evolving character of the institution responsible for the development of these separate but interrelated initiatives? Based on official statistics gathered by the HSFCA, from 1985 to 2021, the FTA Program has awarded 340 grants to masters and apprentices that self-identify as American, Burmese, Chinese, Filipino, Native Hawaiian, Japanese, Javanese, Jewish, Korean, Lao,
In 2016 the HSFCA amended its collection Management Policy, after seven years without changes, in order to allow for the temporary display and acquisition of artworks from the Honolulu Biennial, a Hawai‘i-based international event, resulting in the purchasing of work by Kānaka artists, Charlton Kūpaa Hee in 2017 and ʻimaikalani Kalâhele in 2019.

There has not been a group exhibition of contemporary Native Hawaiian art at this scale hosted by a Honolulu museum institution, state-run or otherwise, since Nā Maka Hou (2001) at the Honolulu Academy of Arts (now the Honolulu Museum of Art). In an effort to reposition itself in the 21st century and in preparation for the museum’s 75th anniversary, the Academy embarked on a capital campaign under the leadership of the Director, Geroget Ellis. Begun in 1997, the Henry R. Luce Pavilion Complex, a prominent piece of the larger campaign, opened ceremoniously in the spring of 2001. To inaugurate the new complex, the museum presented Nā Maka Hou: New Visions in Contemporary Native Hawaiian Art. It was the first time in the institution’s history, since its establishment in 1922, that an exhibition of Native Hawaiian art occupied one of its main galleries. Bringing together 58 artists and over 100 works of art, Nā Maka Hou, organized by David J. de la Torre then Associate Director of the museum and curated by a community advisory committee including Momi Cazimero, Linda Moriarty, Deborah Dunn, and Dr. Charman Akina, was an unparalled attempt by the Academy at increasing the visibility of Kānaka art and artists, as well as their accompanying concerns. Although Mai hoʻohuli i ka lima i luna does not take the format of an “open call” exhibition and is not as expansive as Nā Maka Hou, neither in the number of artists nor artworks included, it nonetheless picks up the conversation again. Acknowledging this exhibition precedent, we have intentionally featured several artworks from the APP Collection that were acquired by the HSFCA from Nā Maka Hou.

In 1966, Governor Burns appointed Masaru “Pundy” Yokouchi (1925-2006) as the first HSFCA member and Chairperson. Occupying the position until 1978, Yokouchi’s alliances and understanding of local governance, culture, and the arts shaped the early years of the organization and influenced the initial trajectory of the APP Program and Collection. From its beginnings into the early 21st century, Americans of Japanese ancestry have played an especially active role in the HSFCA and its collection. A case in point, artwork by five modernist artists—Isami Doi, Bumpei Akaji, Tadashi Sato, Satoru Abe, and Harry Tsuchidana—all nisei, second generation, born in Hawai‘i, represent approximately 3.1% of the artwork in the APP Collection. Cumulatively, the five aforementioned American artists of Japanese ancestry have more pieces in the state’s collection than all artworks by Kānaka artists combined. The same could be said of artwork by five White artists of European ancestry—Shirley Russell, Juliette May Fraser, Madge Tennent, Jean Charlot, and Francis Haar—which accounts for approximately 3.3% of the artwork in the APP Collection. It is no secret that exhibition-making within a state facility in Hawai‘i, comes with certain legacies and limitations—namely those of White and Asian settler colonialism, capitalism, and heteropatriarchy. Bringing attention to these challenging realities is a call to action. Indeed, times do change.

Where is the collection’s bite? We asked ourselves this over a meal, following a day of sifting through index cards and 3-ring binders in the HSFCA office library. We chose to approach the state’s collection as a living entity, one that hosts numerous and at times conflicting narratives. We chose to curate across materials, techniques, and generations to highlight continuities and shared concerns between artworks and their makers. Ours is not an effort to tell the story, but instead to offer a reading of a moment in the maturing lives of the APP Collection and the FTA Program. It is our hope that the perspectives we bring will help to encourage growth in alternative and unanticipated directions.

Mai hoʻohuli i ka lima i luna spreads out across HiSAM over the course of a year, occupying different spaces at different times—a wall display case, gift shop, café, and sculpture garden on the first floor, and a sculpture lobby and multiple gallery rooms on the second floor. Our curatorial response varies with each space as do the artworks by emerging, established, and unknown artists. In certain moments, the exhibition is conventional, in others experimental; such as mapping interpersonal relations within a group of artists, paying attention to materials and techniques, recognizing struggles of the past, dwelling with kaona in the present, and facing Indigenous futures already in the making.

On the First Floor

Canoes of Polynesia (1969-1972), a series of fourteen oil paintings of wa'a by Herb Kawainui Kāne (1928-2011), master painter and co-founder of the Polynesian Voyaging Society (PVS), is presented in a wall display case. Depicting canoe forms of Oceania’s island nations, Kāne calls attention to differences while also acknowledging commonalities with respect to wayfinding traditions of Moananu‘a‘kea, the Pacific. Over the course of the exhibition, Kāne’s fleet travels throughout the museum, reinstalled at regular intervals across the first floor display case and in the second floor Diamond Head gallery.

Behind the procession of vessels is an expansive wall treatment by Hana Yoshihata, a young artist and PVS crew member. Yoshihata’s painting, Kawainui (2020), has been poured, in honor of Kāne, with a mixture of coastal seawater from Kealakekua and deep sea water from Ka Piko o Wākea (equator) gathered on the homecoming leg of Hōkūle‘a’s Worldwide Voyage in 2017. As with the ocean and voyaging—pathways of connectivity to peoples and places, spanning centuries, cultures, and solar systems—the installation of work by Kāne and Yoshihata also bridges a generational divide, bringing “old” and “new” together in a shared time and space.

Outside, in the Sculpture Garden, a work carved in stone by Sean K. L. Browne, Ke Kia‘i (The Guardian) (2003), takes the form of an adze. The piece references Mauna Kea, a dormant shield volcano on Moku o Keawe and home to the largest basalt adze quarry in the island chain. Standing upright and steadfast, Browne’s ko‘i pays homage to our ancestors, our guardians near and far, above and below, in front and behind. In doing so it calls to Kū Kia‘i Mauna, a Kānaka-led movement to protect Mauna a Wākea, an ancestral place of cosmological significance, from the construction of the Thirty Meter Telescope International Observatory atop its sacred summit. Comprised of Rustenburg granite from South Africa with a base of Akasaka granite from Japan, Ke Kia‘i hones different materials and traditions of minimalism.

On the Second Floor

The Sculpture Lobby pairs works in wood by Rocky Ka‘iouliokahihikolō‘Ehu Jensen and Wright Bowman, Sr. (1907-2003), two important contact points during the 1970s amidst a flourishing Native Hawaiian art movement. Jensen’s Ke ‘Ea ‘Ekolu O Ke Kanaka (Three Souls of Man) (1978), a figurative abstraction carved from milo wood and inset with mother-of-pearl, towers, eight feet tall, at the far end of the room. Bowman, Sr.’s Hōkūle‘a (1978), a scale replica in koa, lauhala, and sennit of Hawai‘i’s most significant double hull voyaging canoe, responsible for reviving Indigenous navigation techniques in the archipelago and elsewhere over the past forty-five years, rests atop a base positioned opposite Jensen’s carving. Together these works further situate exhibition goers within contemporary expressions of ancestral knowledge and cultural tradition.

At the entrance to the second floor Diamond Head gallery is a painting on a black wall, Ka Hiwa (2000), by Kau‘i Chun. Inspired by the tiered Kahiwa Falls on the northern coast of Moloka‘i, where his grandmother was from, Chun’s representation of geography and genealogy, in blended acrylic and ‘alae‘a on canvas, summons the blackness of esteemed offerings. Within this hiwa, this color of deep potential held open by painterly representation, are layers upon layers of ancestors—life of the land.

Moving through Chun’s blackness, into the front gallery room, a title wall text provides orientation. Two sculptural works flank the introductory text. Ikaika (1980), a sturdy bronze with black granite base, by Sean K. L. Browne references mahi‘ole, helmet forms, symbols of rank, and the vigor of warriors. Homegrown: Yellow #2, Orange #2, Blue #1 (2009) by Mai‘a’i Tubbs consists of three vibrant bonsai tree forms delicately made of upcycled everyday items—plastic push pins, plates, and forks—that have been heat treated, fused, and transformed anew.

Not far away, Wailele a Hina (1986), a fiber work by Pam Barton, cascades down a white wall. Suspended in air, between two large windows that provide filtered views to the ever-changing exterior environment, Barton’s wall hanging, comprised of wauke (paper mulberry, Broussonetia papyrifera) cultivated, harvested, and beaten by the artist, gestures towards Hina, akua and renowned kapa-maker, in title, form, and content. Like the clouds in the sky, often cited as examples of Hina’s kapa, Barton’s work expands material culture beyond the world of things.

Near Barton’s flowing folds, a second work in wood, Wa’a Hoe #2 (2001), by master wood fabricator Wright Bowman, Sr., stands at rest. Instrumental to the resurgence of woodworking in Hawai‘i and an early leader of PVS, Bowman Sr.’s large koa steering paddle offers direction to those in need, a reminder to navigate into the future with an awareness of the past. Close by, Herb Kāne’s wa’a paintings, also featured in the first floor display case, further emphasize Bowman Sr.’s vital message. Over the course of the exhibition, Kāne’s Canoes of Polynesia cycle through the gallery at regular intervals. “Komo mai kau māpuna hoe. Put in your dip of the paddle. Pitch in.”

Onward, from Bowman, Sr.’s paddle and Kāne’s canoe, visitors reach a low plinth, painted black and staged in front of a lively green wall. Accenting the plinth, like new growth after a lava flow, are eight forms: a pair of small scale glass pieces wrapped in a delicate knotless netting of copper wire and beads, Two of a Kind (2002), by Bernice Akamine; a playful minimal sculpture in wood, Very Simple (1975), by Mark A. Chai; an abstract sculpture carved from Italian marble, Puna (2005), by Sean K. L. Browne; a curved figure in burley koa from a larger series, Suntan #3 (2000), by Pat Kaimoku Pīnē; a ceramic raku vase that holds the folklore of a wahi pana, Kualoa (1989), by Kauka de Silva; a Pa‘aulilo, Hawai‘i island farm grown gourd in the tradition of Hue Wai Pāwehe,
In 2015, Lagunero, Meyer, Orme, Ching, Pao, and Enos collaborated on a large two-sided mural, ‘Āina Aloha, which traveled to national and international conferences addressing healing and wellness within marginalized, Indigenous, and Kānaka communities. The group effort built on over a decade of large-scale community mural projects supported by participants from public, private, charter, and immersion schools. Particularly notable are Hawai‘i Loa Kū Like Kākou (2011) and Ho‘ohuli Hou (2005).

Hawai‘i Loa Kū Like Kākou was a response to a lack of representation, specifically the absence of Native Hawaiian art at the Hawai‘i Convention Center (HCC). The community mural was the result of a tri-party agreement between the Hawai‘i Tourism Authority (HTA), established in 1998, the Office of Hawaiian Affairs (OHA), founded in 1978, and Pu‘uhonua Society, an non-profit arts organization formalized in 1972. The project was managed by Pu‘uhonua Society on behalf of OHA, and gifted by OHA to HTA who accepted the gift of the community on behalf of the State of Hawai‘i. Hawai‘i Loa Kū Like Kākou was produced in advance of the 19th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Economic Leaders’ Meeting, an inter-governmental convening of 21 member economies in the Pacific Rim, held at the HCC in Honolulu during November of 2011. The second permanent artwork by Kānaka at the Convention Center, it was the first to be prominently displayed near the ground floor entrance.

Ho‘ohuli Hou was a response to an invitation by the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum, a museum of history and science founded in 1889. Currently installed on the 3rd floor of Hawaiian Hall, this community mural was a rumination on the 3rd floor of Hawaiian Hall, this community mural was a rumination on the need for contemporary Native Hawaiian art. This mural was commissioned by the Bishop Museum in 2011. The second permanent artwork by Kānaka at the Convention Center, it was the first to be prominently displayed near the ground floor entrance.

Returning to the Diamond Head gallery and continuing mauka into the adjacent room, Eros I (1974), a work on canvas in charcoal, conte, and acrylic, by Clemente Lagundimao, Jr. flutters in a passageway. As one of the earliest examples of Kānaka art in the APP Collection, the available information on Lagundimao’s geometric abstraction is limited, leaving abundant space for interpretation. The work’s palette, composition of partially merging shapes, and title, motion to the kinetic energy of aloha and the radical potential of breath.

In the next room are examples of artworks by an intergenerational group of frequent collaborators, community organizers, educators, and friends—Al Kahekili‘uila Lagunero, Meleanna Aluli Meyer, Kahi Ching, Harinani Orme, Carl F. K. Pao, Solomon Robert Nui Enos, Charlton Kūpā’a Hee, and ‘Īmaikalani Kalāhele. Through their artwork we remember that social relationships, imbued with personal and cultural meaning, are a life force of many movements, artistic or otherwise.

Ahaka‘i (1988), a prophetic work in acrylic on canvas by Lagunero, invokes the power of focused ritual to reassemble energies of former times and channel deep cultural knowledge into the present.
Lagunero’s uninterrupted prayer, Ulupō (Night Vision) (1988), a mixed media collage on paper by Meleanna Aluli Meyer, carries on the potent work of visioning. As darkness grows thick revelations burst forth, chaotic reds and blacks, from nightly realms. Kāne (2015), a painting on wood by Harinani Orme, also recognizes elemental forces, as embodied in akua, and their influence on Hawai‘i and its peoples. Hauloli‘i (2001), a painting of acrylic, paper, and shellac on canvas by Carl F. K. Pao, descends into geometric language and taps into the potential of offspring in an expanded sense. The Trillionth Sister (2011), a mixed media vertically oriented hanging scroll by Solomon Enos, spans from the depths of the ocean to the far reaches of outer space. One of a series of eleven pieces, Enos’ painting delves into Indigenous futurism, reinterpreting traditional Native Hawaiian and Polynesian mo‘olelo and the characters that inhabit them through the permeable lenses of contemporary science fiction, fantasy, and horror.

Close by on a second low plinth, painted black and staged in front of another lively green wall, is a gathering of sculptural works. Starseed IV (2008), a vessel carved from Helumoa coconut wood by Kahi Ching, the largest from his “Starseed” series, reaches for the sky. As with seeds that have made their way to Hawai‘i by wind, water, and living organisms, so too cosmic dust, the stuff of vast galaxies. A smaller vessel form, Maka‘aoa (2014), in ceramic with aerosol and nail polish, by Kūpa‘a Hee, is placed in relation to Pao’s painting. Hee is a former student of Pao, and the two have established a strong link by exhibiting together on several occasions. At the center of the group hover three upright forms of entwined paracord and wire by ʻĪmaikalani Kalāhele, Hānau Kane (n.d.), ʻEle ʻEle Kane (n.d.), and Nā Mea Kane (n.d).

At the edge of a Collection, Museum, State Organization

In January of 1976, members of a community based islands-wide grassroots organization, now known as the Protect Kaho‘olawe ʻOhana (the ʻOhana), slipped past U.S. Coast Guard patrols and “illegally occupied” Target Island, Kanaloa Kaho‘olawe. The ʻOhana filed a civil suit in U.S. District Court later that same year—Aluli et al. v. Brown (Civ. No. 76-0380)—to protect Kaho‘olawe from further violence. These direct actions, which built on previous struggles in Kalama, Waialhole, and Waikāne Valleys and responded to nearly a century of U.S. occupation, in turn galvanized a cultural reawakening across the archipelago, reshaping life in the years to come. As such, they are embodied best in the present by actions related to Mauna a Wākea, a site of contestation and convergence, where many have held and continue to hold space and time with clarity of vision, beliefs, and practices.

Also amidst demands for self-determination and governance in 1976, Hale Naua III (Society of Maoli Arts)16 co-founded by Rocky and Lucia Jensen along with others, presented Artistic Alana at Honolulu Hale—the official seat of government for the City & County of Honolulu. A short walk from HiSAM through the ‘Iolani Palace grounds and past the Hawai‘i State Public Library, Honolulu Hale sits across the street from Kawaihaʻo Church and the Hawaiian Mission Houses, erected by Protestant missionaries in Hawai‘i who arrived in the 1820s. Artistic Alana was one of the first exhibitions in the islands to focus on Native Hawaiians that publicly self-identified as “contemporary artists,” consciously linking Western and Native Hawaiian traditions of art-making and cultural production. Included in this exhibition of contemporary Native Hawaiian art, amongst members of Hale Nauā III, was another of the group’s co-founders, ʻĪmaikalani Kalāhele. In closing this essay we turn towards the vital work of Kalāhele, a musician, poet, artist, and activist from Nuʻuanu, Oʻahu who has stood as a pillar within various communities, steadfast in his devotion and dedication to Kānaka art and “the movement” at large for over four decades.

In 2019, the HSFCA acquired its first works by Kalāhele, since the commissioning of a piece for the Kamakakūokalani Center for Hawaiian Studies in 1997. The purchase consisted of four modest forms—three of which are included in the exhibition in question—from an extensive collection titled Thirty Years of Miniature Sculptures (1980s - present). This body of work was installed in the first floor wall display case of HiSAM as part of an international contemporary art event, the Honolulu Biennial 2019, To Make Wrong / Right / Now curated by Nina Tonga with assistant curator Josh Tengan. Long overdue, this recent acquisition marks a momentous turning point in the state museum institution’s collecting practices while also signaling a need for further intervention—HULI.

Mai hoʻohuli i ka lima i luna centers on artists whose culture has been historically marginalized and oppressed by the U.S., both its state and federal governments. The widespread underrepresentation and misrepresentation of Kānaka in Hawai‘i demonstrates the toxic conditions that many Black, Indigenous, and People of Color have endured for centuries and the longstanding need for remediation. This act of centering underscores an ongoing call for increased support of Kānaka artists both inside and outside the walls of the Hawai‘i State Art Museum and the domain of the Hawai‘i State Foundation on Culture and the Arts. As we continue to stand guard with an invigorated awareness, we honor the work that has been done, hold steady courses underway, and celebrate auspicious changes to come. Aia nō ka pono—o ka hoʻohuli i ka lima i lalo, ‘aʻole o ka hoʻohuli i luna.

Kahuʻaina Broderick, Kaʻiʻili Chun, Kapulani Landgraf
Kapiʻolani Community College, Kalāhū, Waikīkī, Kona, Oʻahu, Hawaiʻi, Moananuiākea ʻIkiʻiki 2020
EXHIBITION PLAN
FIRST FLOOR

WALL DISPLAY CASE

SCULPTURE GARDEN

SECOND FLOOR

SCULPTURE LOBBY

'EWA GALLERY
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Artist</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Year(s)</th>
<th>Materials</th>
<th>Dimensions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Herb Kawainui Kāne</td>
<td>Canoes of Polynesia</td>
<td>1969-1972</td>
<td>oil on canvas</td>
<td>19 5/8 x 29 3/4 inches (each)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Hana Yoshihata</td>
<td>Kawainui</td>
<td>2020</td>
<td>deep sea water (Ka Piko o Wākea, equator) and coastal sea water (Kealakekua), acrylic, paper</td>
<td>51 x 360 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Sean Kekamakupa’a i ka pono Ka’onohi o Kalani Lee Loy Browne</td>
<td>Ke Kia’i (The Guardian)</td>
<td>2003</td>
<td>Rustenburg granite (South Africa), Akasaka granite (Japan)</td>
<td>51 1/2 x 28 x 22 1/2 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Rocky Ka‘io-liokahi-kolo‘Ehu Jensen</td>
<td>Ke ‘Ea Ekolu O Ke Kanaka (Three Souls of Man)</td>
<td>1978</td>
<td>milo, mother of pearl</td>
<td>96 x 24 x 30 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Wright Bowman, Sr.</td>
<td>Hōkūle‘a</td>
<td>1978</td>
<td>koa, lauhala, and sennit</td>
<td>35 x 63 x 16 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Marques Hanalei Marzan</td>
<td>Wahine‘ōma‘o</td>
<td>2009</td>
<td>na’au pua’a</td>
<td>96 x 48 inches</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
EXHIBITION PLAN
SECOND FLOOR

DIAMOND HEAD GALLERY
MAKAI ROOM
LIST OF ARTWORKS

7  Kau'i Chun
(b. 1949, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Honolulu, O'ahu)
Ka Hiwa (2000)
acrylic on canvas
68 1/4 x 53 1/2 inches

8  Sean K. L. Browne
i'ikaika (1980)
cast bronze, black granite
26 1/2 x 11 x 11 inches

9  Maika'i Tubbs
(b. 1979 in Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Brooklyn, New York, U.S.A.)
Homegrown: Yellow #2, Orange #2, Blue #1 (2009) pushpins, plastic plates and forks, wood variable, 12 x 11 x 11 inches

10  Pam Barton
(b. 1929, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Volcano, Hawai'i)
Wailele a Hina (1986)
tapa wall hanging
64 x 14 inches

11  Wright Bowman, Sr.
Wa'a Hoe #2 (2001)
koa wood
74 x 17 1/2 x 14 inches

12  Herb Kawainui Kāne
Canoes of Polynesia (1969-1972)
oil on canvas
19 5/8 x 29 3/4 inches (each)

13  Marie McDonald
(b. 1926, Waiekele, O'ahu; d. 2019, Waimea, Hawai'i)
Two Piece Embroidered (2013)
‘ōlena, ‘alaea, kukui, and ‘uki‘uki on kapa
24 x 56 inches

14  Abigail Romanchak
(b. 1976, Wailuku, Maui; lives in Waiakea, Maui)
Tracked (2010)
ink, iron oxide, earth, paper variable, 33 3/4 x 34 inches (each)

15  Clemente Lagundimao, Jr.
(b. 1936, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Honolulu, O'ahu)
Eros I (1974)
charcoal, conte, and acrylic on canvas
48 x 48 inches
16  Bernice Akamine
(b. 1949, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Volcano, Hawai'i)
Two of a Kind (2002)
glass, glass beads, copper wire
2 x 3 x 3 inches (each)

17  Mark A. Chai
(b. 1954, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Aiea, O'ahu)
Very Simple (1975)
wood
19 5/8 x 15 1/2 x 5 5/8 inches

18  Sean K. L. Browne
Puna (2005)
Italian marble
33 1/2 x 14 x 14 inches

19  Pat Kaimoku Pinē
(b. 1952 in Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Wai'anae, O'ahu)
Suntan #3 (2000)
koa
9 x 35 x 13 inches

20  Kauka de Silva
(b. 1953, Hilo, Hawai'i; lives in Kailua, O'ahu)
Kualoa (1989)
ceramic raku vase
16 x 11 x 10 7/8 inches

21  Elroy Juan
(b. 1954, Honoka'a, Hawai'i; lives in Pa'auilo, Hawai'i)
Frond (2011)
dyed gourd
25 x 11 x 11 inches

22  Pam Barton
Karaftirumu I (1990)
mixed media fiber basket
8 x 16 x 16 inches

23  Henry Hanale Kila Hopfe
(b. 1949, Waipahu, O'ahu; lives in Wai'anae, O'ahu)
Kiʻi Poho Pōhaku (2015)
vesicular basalt
6 x 8 x 13 inches
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Artist</th>
<th>Birthday Details</th>
<th>Artwork</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Medium</th>
<th>Dimensions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>Meleanna Aluli Meyer</td>
<td>(b. 1956, Mōkapu, O'ahu; lives in Mākiki, O'ahu)</td>
<td>Ulupō (Night Vision)</td>
<td>(1998)</td>
<td>pastel, acrylic, mixed media collage</td>
<td>44 x 33 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>Al Kahekili'uila Lagunero</td>
<td>(b. 1945, Pāwa'a, O'ahu; lives in Makawao, Maui)</td>
<td>Ahaka'i</td>
<td>(1988)</td>
<td>acrylic on canvas</td>
<td>39 1/4 x 29 1/4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>Harinani Orme</td>
<td>(b. 1957 in Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Honolulu, O'ahu)</td>
<td>Kāne</td>
<td>(2015)</td>
<td>acrylic on wood panel</td>
<td>24 x 24 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>Carl F. K. Pao</td>
<td>(b. 1971, Kailua, O'ahu; lives in Kea'au, Hawai'i)</td>
<td>Hauloli</td>
<td>(2001)</td>
<td>acrylic, paper, shellac on canvas</td>
<td>52 3/8 x 17 7/8 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>Solomon Robert Nui Enos</td>
<td>(b. 1976, Mākaha, O'ahu; lives in Nu'uanu, O'ahu)</td>
<td>The Trillionth Sister</td>
<td>(2011)</td>
<td>acrylic, enamel, grease pencils on asphalt saturated felt</td>
<td>108 x 36 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>29</td>
<td>Charlton Kūpa'a Hee</td>
<td>(b. 1989, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Kāne'ohe, O'ahu)</td>
<td>Maka'aoa</td>
<td>(2014)</td>
<td>ceramic, aerosol, nail polish</td>
<td>19 x 10 x 4 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30</td>
<td>'Īmaikalani Kalāhele</td>
<td>(b. 1950, Nu'uanu, Oahu; lives in Kalihi, O'ahu)</td>
<td>Hānau Kane</td>
<td>(n.d.)</td>
<td>para cord and wire</td>
<td>34 1/4 x 5 1/4 x 3 3/4 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>'Ele 'Ele Kane</td>
<td>(n.d.)</td>
<td>para cord and wire</td>
<td>42 3/4 x 4 1/8 x 4 1/8 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Nā Mea Kane</td>
<td>(n.d.)</td>
<td>para cord and wire,</td>
<td>31 1/4 x 3 1/4 x 3 1/2 inches</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31</td>
<td>Kahi Ching</td>
<td>(b. 1962, Honolulu, O'ahu; lives in Honolulu, O'ahu)</td>
<td>Starseed IV</td>
<td>(2008)</td>
<td>coconut wood</td>
<td>72 3/4 x 13 1/2 x 13 1/2 inches</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
MAI HOʻOHULI / KA LIMA / LUNA

BERNICE AKAMINE
PAM BARTON
WRIGHT BOWMAN, SR.
SEAN K. L. BROWNE
MARK A. CHAI
KAHI CHING
KAUʻI CHUN KAUKA DE SILVA
SOLOMON ENOS
CHARLTON KŪPA‘A HEE
HENRY HANALE KILA HOPFE
ROCKY KAʻIOULIOKAHIHIKOLOʻEHU JENSEN
ELROY JUAN
ʻĪMAIKALANI KALĀHELE
HERB KAWAINUI KĀNE
CLEMENTE LAGUNDIMAO, JR.
AL KAHEKIʻI UIULA LAGUNERO
MARQUES HANALEI MARZAN
MARIE MCDONALD
MELEANNA ALULI MEYER
HARINANI ORME
CARL F. K. PAO
PAT KAIMOKU PINÉ
ABIGAIL ROMANCHAK
MAIKAʻI TUBBS
HANA YOSHIHATA

CURATED BY DREW BRODERICK
KAʻILI CHUN
KAPULANI LANDGRAF

OPENING JULY 13, 2020
HAWAII STATE ART MUSEUM
NO. 1 CAPITOL DISTRICT BUILDING
250 SOUTH HOTEL STREET
HONOLULU, HI 96813

HISAM.HAWAII.GOV
(808) 586-0300

HOURS
MONDAY TO SATURDAY
10 AM TO 4 PM
FREE ADMISSION

PARKING AVAILABLE AT ALIʻI PLACE
1099 ALAKEA STREET